

ABSTRACT

"Instant Musician, Recording Artist and Composer" permits ordinary computer users to select an instrument and music number from their computer screen and immediately start playing the selected instrument by simply typing letters displayed on their computer screens. It also may serve as a learning tool for learning how to play classical instruments by depicting the physical parts of the instruments to be activated with each note entered into the keyboard. Additional features allow personal computer users to make recordings of multiple instruments (and voice) numbers with altered sound spectrums, if desired, as well as composing their own music by simply clicking a mouse, modifying other music scores, humming, whistling or any other sound input.
